YOUR DOCTOR, DENTIST OR LAWYER COULD TELL YOU

They could tell you that long years went into their preparation to practice. But only personal experience gave them the knowledge and confidence of experts.

The Schaffner-Denzer staff has that same confidence that comes only with experience. If added together, the years our staff members have been in this work would total nearly a lifetime.

Those years of service mean that we do expert embalming. They also mean many other refinements of service that experience has shown our patrons appreciate.

Here Is Text of President's Request For Authority To Call Out Guard

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Following is the text of a letter sent by President Roosevelt to the senate today asking congress to grant him authority to order the national guard into active training.

The increasing seriousness of the international situation demands that every element of our national defense structure be brought as rapidly as possible to the highest state of efficiency, in training as well as in equipment and material.

The national guard of the United States, an integral and vital part of the army, comprises a body of men who have voluntarily assumed an obligation to serve the nation in any crisis. To the extent possible under normal conditions, the officers and men of the national guard have prepared themselves for this service, and I am assured that today the guard has reached the highest state of efficiency in its peace-time history.

Men Must Be Trained

The developments of modern warfare are such, however, that only the seasoned and highly trained troops can hope for success in combat. Our citizen soldiers, no matter how willing and earnest, cannot possibly attain the necessary degree of efficiency through their normal training activities. Even our professional soldiers required months of intensive training to bring them to their present satisfactory state. We know too well the tragedy that ensues when inadequately trained men are assailed by a more skillful adversary.

Some weeks ago I asked the congress for authority to order the national guard into active service should an emergency require this action when your body was not in session. That proposal is no longer sufficient, as I am now convinced that the security of the nation demands that this component of our army be brought to the highest possible state of training efficiency more rapidly than its present program permits. Moreover, this group of men who of necessity must be among the first to fight in the

U. S. 1940 INCOME NEAR 1937 RECOVERY PEAK

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The commerce department reported today that the national income for the six months of 1940 was within one per cent of the comparable 1937 period the peak "recovery" year.

June payments reflecting a rise in industrial activity as well as a seasonal gain in dividend and interest disbursements, reached $6,202,000,000. This was $551,000,000 more than in May.

For the first half of 1940, total income payments were $30,338,000,000, a gain of $1,657,000,000 of five per cent over the 1939 period.

(Mont.) one of the leading foes of the program. The C.I.O. chief said he was "in full agreement with Senator Wheeler on this thing."

Favor Voluntary System

Senator Taft, like Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.), suggested trying a "voluntary system" of army enlistment before adopting conscription. Although some military officials have contended that such a plan would fail, Vandenberg predicted that 1,000,000 American youths would volunteer within three months.

Although congress was proceeding cautiously with the military training issue, it pushed ahead with other defense legislation.

A new $4,800,000,000 appropriation for the army and navy was headed for quick passage this week in the house, and probably in the senate.

Leaders said that a special $25,000,000 bill to provide more power in the Tennessee Valley authority for production of aluminum for airplanes also would be disposed of in short order.

There was recurring talk that if congress could dispose of its defense bills in two or three weeks, a recess for a month then might be taken, because the experts said the excess profits tax bill would not be ready for many weeks.

'The Mortal Storm' At Palace Praised As Patriotic Drama

Marionites have the opportunity today and Tuesday of seeing at the Palace a picture which evokes a prayer, "God bless America," from audiences. It's "The Mortal Storm" starring James Stewart, Margaret Sullivan and Robert Young.

Here, in simplest, forthright style is told the tragedy of Hitler's rise to power, produced on the highest levels of motion picture standards. It is superb from every standpoint. It should be a "must see" on every patriot's list as well as a "don't miss" on the lists of those who enjoy dramatic entertainment at its best.

The cast is flawless, the dialogue and situations are direct—never stopping over into the maudlin—the direction is sustained throughout and altogether it is one of Hollywood's finest productions. Phyllis Buttom's best-selling novel supplied the story and it followed faithfully. Frank Morgan again proves that he is as excellent at drama as he is in buffed characterizations. His portrayal of the non-Aryan German professor is one to remember. His family and his family's friendships are torn asunder when Hitler comes to power. His steps, Robert Stark and William Orr, become storm-troopers. His daughter, Miss Sullivan—whose husband breaks her engagement to Young because of his Nazi activities—Stewart, another suitor, is exiled to Austria because he helps one of their beloved teachers across the border to safety. Morgan dies in a concentration camp. His widow, charmingly and feelingly played by Irene Rich, takes their young son across the border but the daughter is detained. Stewart hears of her predicament and returns for her, by way of a secret pass over the mountains.

Marion, beautifully played by Maria Ouspenskaya, helps them escape but their plans become known and Young heads the patrol sent out to stop them. They are discovered by the patrol and Young gives the signal to fire.

An amusing cartoon comedy and a new reel complete the program—H. H.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Queen Olga Promises Madge She Will Keep Secret the Information Given Her by the Chief.

QUEEN OLGA was calm at my message, but her daughter threw me an interested and intrigued glance.

"How exciting!" she said. "I hope he wants me to come over also."

"Olinde" her mother said with strong rebuke in her voice, and the girl, deflated in an instant as she always is by her mother's discipline, said mechanically, "I'm sorry, 'Mamma,' and stood, literally at attention, awaiting her mother's further pleasure.

"I shall be glad to go over with you, at once, my dear Madge," Olga said, and, throwing a scarf around her shoulders for protection against the draughty hall, she walked out of the door with me, and down the corridor to my father's room. On the way, she put a detaining hand on my arm.

"Only one question," she said. "I gathered, from your silence, that your father did not wish to see Olinde. By any chance, does this summons have any connection with her activities?"

"It has nothing to do with Olinde, except indirectly," I said. "But it is something most important, and, because of the danger involved, must be invested with absolute secrecy until the peril of which you know is over. My father is very anxious for you to know this secret, but he feels that your knowledge must be conditioned upon a promise from you. Unless he secures that promise, which he knows will be strictly kept, he cannot give you some information which he knows you will be exceedingly glad to receive."

A Promise Given

"I can think of no promise your father would ask of me which I could not make," she said graciously. "Won't you please tell me what it is?"

"Simply this," I answered. "He wishes you promise that you will not by gesture or word—even a syllable—pass on the information he gives you, not even to your daughter, or your betrothed husband—until he gives you permission to reveal the secret."

She looked at me steadily, and there was a glint in her dark eyes which might be resentment, but which I decided after an instant was amusement instead.

"He means especially to my daughter and Philip, doesn't he?" she asked. "But you and he may rest assured that neither they nor any other person will hear what he wishes to tell me. I give you my solemn word on that."

"I don't need that," I told her, smiling. "Your mere assurance is enough both for my father and for me. And—one word more. It is not bad news. You have no need to be worried. But I really have no right to say even this much. My father wishes to tell you his errand himself."

"I should not have asked," she murmured contritely, but I stopped her protest with a friendly little squeeze of her arm.

"Of course you should," I told her. "But here we are, and you won't have to wait much longer. My father has much on his mind tonight."

The emeralds were not in sight.
